Focus . . .

You choose a legal boutique firm because it has greater focus. You expect the attorneys to have specialized experience. Christopher & Weisberg is a boutique focused solely on Intellectual Property Law. We proudly note that publications such as Intellectual Property Today have placed us on their list of “Top Patent & Trademark Firms.” All attorneys at Christopher & Weisberg are registered to practice before the United States Patent and Trademark Office, as well as various state and federal courts, and they have spent their entire legal careers in the field of Intellectual Property Law. Unlike most non-patent attorneys, our attorneys have science and engineering degrees (most have Master’s degrees in technical areas) in the fields that encompass the technologies and products of our clients in addition to years of on-the-job technical experience obtained before entering the legal arena.

You choose an intellectual property boutique firm because you need attorneys that understand what your business is about. You expect your attorneys to give you legal advice that is mindful of your business objectives. Our attorneys have extensive transactional experience. We have guided clients in financing rounds, mergers, acquisitions, asset transfers, licensing deals, strategic alliances, and more. Several of our attorneys hold MBA degrees and many have substantial business and management experience from prior careers.

You choose a boutique firm because you have a specific need. You expect the firm to pay attention to you. Christopher & Weisberg strives with every client to provide personalized service that is responsive to your needs and situation – the type of personalized service that is focused upon contributing to your legal, technical and business goals.

Although we focus on one area of law, we have successfully served:

Start-ups and growth stage enterprises . . .

Large, multinational companies . . .

Investors and venture capitalists . . .

About Litigation...

While many law firms advertise that their attorneys are “Intellectual Property Litigators,” those attorneys often do not have any technical education or experience, or any substantive knowledge of patent and trademark law. In fact, many so-called “IP Litigators” have never represented clients before the United States Patent and Trademark Office (USPTO).

By contrast, Christopher & Weisberg recognizes that the foundation for a winning intellectual property litigation strategy is a combination of technical expertise with a full understanding of the patent and trademark practice, coupled with courtroom savvy. Simply put, our attorneys have technical degrees, as well as industry experience, that are invaluable when representing clients involved in technology-related litigation matters. We have experience prosecuting patents and trademarks with the USPTO; and our attorneys are as comfortable and adept in cross-examining witnesses or negotiating a settlement as they are in inspecting and comprehending complex electrical schematics, software flowcharts, or blueprints.

Genius is 1% inspiration and 99% perspiration. And sometimes a bit of litigation.™
